VILLAGE. n. f. [village, Fr.] A small collection of houses in the country, less than a town.
Beggars, with roaring voices, from low farms,
Or pelting villages, sheep coats, and mills,
Inforce their charity. Shakespeare.
The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn.
You have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so; but, like the village curs, Bark when their fellows do. Shakespeare.
The country villages were burnt down to the ground. Knolles.
Those village-words give us a mean idea of the thing. Dryden.
Seam'd o'er with wounds which his own fabre gave,
In the vile habit of a village slave. Pope.
VILLAGER. n. f. [from village.] An inhabitant of the village.
Brutus had rather be a villager,
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under such hard conditions. Shakespeare.
When once her eye
Hath met the virtue of this magick dust,
I shall appear some harmless villager,
Whom thrift keeps up about his country gear. Milton.
If there are conveniences of life, which common use reaches not, it is not reason to reject them, because every villager doth not know them. Locke.
VILLAGE. n. f. [from village.] District of villages.
Robin Goodfellow, are you not he,
That fright the maidens of the villagery? Shakespeare.
VILLAIN. n. f. [villain, Fr. villanus, low Latin.]
1. One who held by a base tenure.
The Irish inhabiting the lands fully conquered, being in condition of slaves and villains, did render a greater revenue, than if they had been made the king's free subjects. Davies.
2. A wicked wretch.
We were prevented by a dozen armed knights, or rather villains, who, using this time of their extreme feebleness, all together set upon them.
O villain! villain! his very opinion in the letter. Abhorred villain! unnatural, detested, brutish villain! Shakespeare.
What in the world,
That names me traitor, villain-like he lies. Shakespeare.
He was stabbed to the heart by the hand of a villain, upon the mere impious pretence of his being odious to the parliament. Clarendon.
Calm thinking villains, whom no faith could fix;
Of crooked counsels, and dark politicks. Pope.
VILLANAGE. n. f. [from villain.]
1. The state of a villain; base servitude.
They exercise most bitter tyranny,
Upon the parts brought into their bondage:
No wretchedness is like to sinful villanage. Fairy Queen.
Upon every such surrender and grant, there was but one freeholder, which was the lord himself; all the rest were but tenants in villanage, and were not fit to be sworn in juries. Davies.
2. Baseness; infamy.
If in thy inoke it ends, their glories shine;
But infamy and villanage are thine. Dryden.
To VILLANIZE. v. a. [from villain.] To debase; to degrade;
to defame.
Were virtue by descent, a noble name
Could never villanize his father's fame;
But, as the first, the last of all the line,
Would, like the sun, ev'n in descending shine. Dryden.
These are the fools, whose stolidity can baffle all arguments; whose glory is in their shame, in the debasing and villanizing of mankind to the condition of beasts. Bentley.
VILLANOUS. adj. [from villain.] Baseness; wickedness.
1. Base; vile; wicked.
2. Sorry.
Thou art my son; I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly a villanous trick of thine eye doth warrant me. Shakespeare.
3. It is used by Shakespeare to exaggerate any think detestable.
We shall lose our time,
And all be turn'd to barnacles or apes,
With foreheads villanous low. Shakespeare. Tempest.
VILLANOUSLY. adv. [from villanous.] Wickedly; basely.
The wandering Numidian falsified his faith, and villanously slew Selymes the king, as he was bathing himself. Knolles.
VILLANOUSNESS. n. f. [from villanous.] Baseness; wickedness.
VILLANY. n. f. [from villain; villomnie, old French.]
1. Wickedness; baseness; depravity.
Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes;
For villany is not without such a rheum:
And he, long traded in it, makes it seem Like rivers of remorse and innocence. Shakespeare.
He is the prince's jester; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villany. Shakespeare.
2. A wicked action; a crime.

VIN

No villany, or flagitious action was ever yet committed;
but a lie was first or last the principal engine to effect it. South.
Such villanies rous'd Horace into wrath;
And 'tis more noble to pursue his path,
Than an old tale. Dryden.
VILLATICK. adj. [villaticus, Lat.] Belonging to villages.
Evening dragon came,
Affailant on the perched roofs,
And nests in order rang'd,
Of tame villatick fowl. Milton.
VILLI. n. f. [Latin.]
In anatomy, are the same as fibres; and in botany, small hairs like the grain of pluff or fluff, with which, as a kind of excrecence, some trees do abound. Quincy.
VILLOUS. adj. [villosus, Lat.] Shaggy; rough.
The liquor of the stomach, which with fasting grows sharp, and the quick sensation of the inward villous coat of the stomach, seem to be the cause of the sense of hunger. Arb.
VIMINEOUS. adj. [vimineus, Latin.] Made of twigs.
As in the hive's vimineous dome,
Ten thousand bees enjoy their home;
Each does her studious action vary,
To go and come, to fetch and carry. Prior.
VINCIBLE. adj. [from vincere, Lat.] Conquerable; supe-rable.
He not vincible in spirit, and well assured that shortness of provision would in a short time draw the feditious to shorter limits, drew his sword. Hayward.
Because 'twas absolutely in my power to have attended more heedfully, there was liberty in the principle, the mistake which influenced the action was vincible. Norris.
VINCIBLENESS. n. f. [from vincible.] Liableness to be overcome. Did.
VINCURE. n. f. [vincitura, Lat.] A binding. Baile.
VINDEMIAL. adj. [vindemia, Latin.] Belonging to a vintage.
To VINDEMIATE. v. n. [vindemia, Latin.] To gather the vintage.
Now vindemiate, and take your bees towards the expiration of this month. Boeyn.
VINDEMIATION. n. f. [vindemia, Lat.] Grape-gathering. Baile.
To VINDICATE. v. a. [vindicare, Lat.]
1. To justify; to support; to maintain.
Where the respondent denies any proposition, the opponent must directly vindicate and confirm that proposition; i. e. he must make that proposition the conclusion of his next syl-logism. Watt's Improvement of the Mind.
2. To revenge; to avenge.
We ought to have added, how far an holy war is to be pursued; whether to enforce a new belief, and to vindicate or punish infidelity? Bacon.
Man is not more inclinable to obey God than man; but God is more powerful to exact subjection, and to vindicate rebellion. Pearson on the Creed.
The more numerous the offenders are, the more his justice is concerned to vindicate the affront. Tilghson.
Assemble ours, and all the Theban race,
To vindicate on Athens thy disgrace. Dryden.
3. To assert; to claim with efficacy.
Never any touch'd upon this way, which our poet justly has vindicated to himself. Dryden's Pref. to Ovid.
The beauty of this town, without a fleet,
From all the world shall vindicate her trade. Dryden.
4. To clear; to protect.
God's ways of dealing with us, are by proposition of terrors and promises. To these is added the authority of the commander, vindicated from our neglect by the interposition of the greatest signs and wonders, in the hands of his prophets, and of his son. Hammond.
I may assert eternal providence,
And vindicate the ways of God to man. Milton.
VINDICATION. n. f. [vindication, Fr. from vindicare.] Defence; assertion; justification.
This is no vindication of her conduct. She still acts a mean part, and, through fear, becomes an accomplice, in endeavouring to betray the Greeks. Brauns.
VINDICATIVE. adj. [from vindicare.] Revengeful; given to revenge.
He, in heat of action,
Is more vindicative than jealous love. Shakespeare.
Publick revenges are for the most part fortunate; but in private revenges it is not so. Vindicative persons live the life of witches, who, as they are mischievous, so end they unfortunate. Bacon.
The fruits of adust choler, and the evaporations of a vindicative spirit. Howell.
Do not too many believe no zeal to be spiritual, but what is censorious or vindicative? Whereas no zeal is spiritual, that is not also charitable. Sprat's Sermon.
Distinguish betwixt a passion purely vindicative, and those counsels where divine justice avenges the innocent. L'Estrange.
VINDICATOR.

VIN

VINDICATOR. n. f. [from vindicare.] One who vindicates;
an assertor.
He treats tyranny, and the vices attending it, with the utmost rigour; and consequently a noble soul is better pleas'd with a jealous vindicator of Roman liberty, than with a temperizing poet. Dryden.
VINDICATORY. adj. [from vindicare.]
1. Punitory; performing the office of vengeance.
The afflictions of Job were no vindicatory punishments to take vengeance of his sins, but probatory chastisements to make trial of his graces. Bramhall's Answer to Hobbs.
2. Defensory; justificatory.
VINDICTIVE. adj. [from vindicta, Latin.] Given to revenge; revengeful.
I am vindictive enough to repel force by force. Dryden.
Augustus was of a nature too vindictive, to have contented himself with so small a revenge. Dryden.
VINE. n. f. [vinum, Latin.] The plant that bears the grape.
The flower consists of many leaves placed in a regular order, and expanding in form of a rose; the ovary, which is situated in the bottom of the flower, becomes a round fruit, full of juice, and contains many small stones in each.
The tree is climbing, sending forth claspers at the joints, by which it fastens itself to what plant stands near it, and the fruit is produced in bunches. The species are, 1. The wild vine, commonly called the claret grape. 2. The July grape. 3. The Corinth grape, vulgarly called the currant grape. 4. The parley leav'd grape. 5. The miller's grape. This is called the Burgundy in England; the leaves of this sort are very much powdered with white in the spring, from whence it had the name of miller's grape. 6. Is what is called in Burgundy Pineau, and at Orleans, Auverna: it makes very good wine. 7. The white chafflas, or royal muscadine: it is a large white grape; the juice is very rich. 8. The black chafflas, or black muscadine; the juice is very rich. 9. The red chafflas, or red muscadine. 10. The burlake grape.
11. The white muscat, or white Frontinac. 12. The red Frontinac. 13. The black Frontinac. 14. The damask grape. 15. The white sweet water. 16. The black sweet water. 17. The white muscadine. 18. The raisin grape.
19. The Greek grape. 20. The pearl grape. 21. The St. Peter's grape, or hesperian. 22. The malmsey grape.
23. The malmsey muscadine. 24. The red Hamburg grape. 25. The black Hamburg, or warmer grape. 26. The Switzerland grape. 27. The white muscat, or Frontinac of Alexandria; called also the Jerusalem muscat and gros mu-cat. 28. The red muscat, or Frontinac of Alexandria.
29. The white melie grape. 30. The white morillon.
31. The Alicante grape. 32. The white Auvernat. 33. The grey Auvernat. 34. The raisin muscat. The late duke of Tuscany, who was very curious in collecting all the sorts of Italian and Greek grapes into his vineyards, was possitied of upwards of three hundred several varieties. Miller.
The vine-prop elm, the poplar never dry. Fairy Queen.
In her days every man shall eat in safety,
Under his own vine, what he plants. Shakespeare.
The captain left of the poor to be vine-dressers. 2 Kings:xxv.
Depending vines the helving cavern screen,
With purple clusters blushing through the green. Pope.
VINEGAR. n. f. [vinagre, Fr.]
1. Wine grown sour.
Vinegar is made by setting the vessel of wine against the hot sun; and therefore vinegar will not burn, much of the finer parts being exhaled. Bacon.
Heav'n's blest beam turns vinegar more four. Pope.
2. Any thing really or metaphorically sour.
Some laugh like parrots at a bag-piper,
And others of such vinegar aspect,
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile. Shakespeare.
VINNEVED, or VINNEY. adj. Mouldy. Ainsworth.
VINEYARD. n. f. [vinetum, Saxon.] A ground planted with vines.
Let us not live in France; let us quit all,
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people. Shakespeare.
Though some had so forfeited in the vineyards, and with the vines, that they had been left behind, the generosity of the Spaniards sent them all home again. Clarendon.
VINOUS. adj. [from vinum, Latin.] Having the qualities of wine; consisting of wine.
The motion of the oily drops may be in part due to some partial solution made by the vinous spirit. Boyle.
Water will imbibe
The small remains of spirit, and acquire A vinous flavour. Philips.
VINTAGE. n. f. [vinage, Fr.] The produce of the vine for the year.
The best vines are in the driest vintages. Bacon.
Our first success in war make Bacchus crown,
And half the vintage of the year our own. Waller.
VINTAGER. n. f. [from vintage.] He who gathers the vintage. Ainsworth.
VINTNER. n. f. [from vinum, Lat.] One who sells wine.

VIO

The vintner may draw what religion he pleases. Howell.
The vintner, by mixing poison with his wines, destroys more lives than any malignant disease. Swift.
VINTRY. n. f. The place where wine is sold. Ainsworth.
VIOL. n. f. [violle, Fr. viola, Ital.] A stringed instrument of musick.
My tongue's use is to me no more,
Than an unstringed viol, or a harp. Shakespeare.
To strain a string, stop it with the finger, as in the necks of lutes and viols. Bacon.
Loud o'er the rest Cremona's trump doth sound;
Me softer airs besit, and softer strings
Of lute, or viol, still more apt for mournful things. Milton.
VIOLABLE. adj. [from violabilis, Lat.] Such as may be violated or hurt.
VIOLA'CEOUS. adj. [from viola, Lat.] Resembling violets.
To VIOLATE. v. a. [violare, Lat.]
1. To injure; to hurt.
I question thy bold entrance, Employ'd to violate the sleep of those Whose dwelling God hath planted here in bliss. Milton.
Kindness for man, and pity for his fate,
May mix with bliss, and yet not violate. Dryden.
Cease
To know what known will violate thy peace. Pope.
2. To infringe; to break any thing venerable.
Some of violated vows
Twixt the souls of friend and friend. Shakespeare.
Those offences which are by their special qualities breaches of supernatural laws, do also, for that they are generally evil, violate in general that principle of reason, which willett universally to fly from evil. Hooker.
3. To injure by irreverence.
I would violate my own arm rather than a church. Brown.
Forbid to violate the sacred fruit. Milton.
4. To ravish; to deflower.
The Sabines violated charms
Obscure'd the glory of his rising arms. Prior.
VIOLA'TION. n. f. [violatio, Lat.]
1. Infringement or injury of something sacred.
Their right conceit that to perjury vengeance is due, was not without good effect, as touching the course of their lives, who feared the wilful violation of oaths. Hooker.
Men, who had no other guide but their reason, considered the violation of an oath to be a great crime. Addison.
2. Rape; the act of deflowering.
If your pure maidens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing violation. Shakespeare.
VIOLA'TOR. n. f. [violator, Lat.]
1. One who injures or infringes something sacred.
May such places, built for divine worship, derive a blessing upon the head of the builders, as lasting as the curse that never fails to rest upon the sacrilegious violators of them. South.
2. A ravisher.
Angelo is an adult'rous thief,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator. Shakespeare.
How does the subject herself to the violator's upbraidings and insults. Clarissa.
VIOLENCE. n. f. [violencia, Latin.]
1. Force; strength applied to any purpose.
To be imprison'd in the viewless wind,
And blown with restless violence about.
All the elements
At least had gone to wreck, disturb'd and torn
With violence of this conflict, had not soon
Th' eternal hung his golden scales. Milton.
2. An attack; an assault; a murder.
A noise did scare me from the tomb;
And she, too desperate, would not go with me:
But, as it seems, did violence on herself. Shakespeare.
3. Outrage; unjust force.
Grieved at his heart, when looking down he saw
The whole earth fill'd with violence; and all flesh Corrupting each their way. Milton's Par. Lost.
4. Eagerness; vehemence.
That seal
You ask with such violence, the king
With his own hand gave me. Shakespeare.
5. Injury; infringement.
We cannot, without offering violence to all records, divine and human, deny an universal deluge. Burnet.
6. Forceful deforation.
VIOLENT. adj. [violentus, Lat.]
1. Forceful; acting with strength.
A violent cross wind blows. Milton.
2. Produced or continued by force.
The posture we find them in, according to his doctrine, must be look'd upon as unnatural and violent; and no violent state can be perpetual. Burnet.
3. Not natural, but brought by force.
Conqueror death discovers them scarce men;
Violent or shameful death their due reward. Milton.
4. Un-
